League ball players wearing whiskers are rare birds these days. One would have to travel a long while with a microscope to find even as much as a moustache in any of the big leagues. A northern Michigan team, however, boasts a player who wears the draperies. His name is long as he can get a solid punch home. He stands six feet three inches in height and weighs 225 pounds. He has been fighting only eighteen months, but he has already succeeded in making his name feared and respected among the heavyweights.

When the name of Woodrow Wilson, presidential candidate, is mentioned we think of a professor in cap and gown. The most of us have never heard that he was once a football coach.

From 1883 to 1890 Wilson was professor of history at Wesleyan university, but he is best remembered there for his success in coaching the famous Wesleyan football team of '89, which defeated Pennsylvania 10 to 2 and won over a long list of less formidable rivals. Professional coaches were rare in those days and Wilson as one of the younger members of the faculty, was chosen by the students as adviser of the football team. He was particularly effective in putting the ginger into the squad, and it is said of him that he could give a "cull down" in a manner that would put to shame even some of the modern coaches.

The National Baseball commission has decided that Milwaukee was not liable for the purchase price of Fitcher Piester, who failed to report to the Milwaukee club for two months after he had been sold by Chicago. The commission further ruled that for every day Piester is retained thereafter the Chicago club will be required to pay him at the rate of the 1912 contract.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 8.—Quartered at the beautiful racing plant just beyond the city limits of Grand Rapids, are the trotters and pacers who are to furnish the sport that marks the first link of the Grand Circuit, which had its opening this afternoon at the Comstock Park track. The program here is a splendid one, made up of nearly a score of little about the blows he receives as events, but all the talk is of the two big fixtures, the Furniture Manufacturers' $10,000 purse and 2:12 trotters and the $5,000 Comstock purse for 2:11 pacers.

Only three games were played Saturday, the Lewis Knitting company forfeiting to the Parker Pen company when he teams failed to appear for the first game at the Fair Grounds. In the only game at the Fair Grounds, the Janesville Machine company's squad nosed out the Recorder team by a score of 4 to 3. The

RESULTS OF RACES ON EDGERTON TRACK

Janesville Horse Take First Place In Three Minute Class—Madison Animal Winner In Free-for-all.

Edgerton, Wis., July 8.—Brown Bessie, owned by Al. Peltier and R. L. Richardson of Madison was the winner in the free-for-all race Saturday afternoon in straight heats. Ambassador of Friendship won first in the 2:20 class mixed race, and Jessie A. of Janesville, first in the three minute class. The program which was postponed from the Fourth, because of rain, was the first race meeting of the season in this part of the state, and attracted a good attendance. The results of the races as tabulated were:
Free-for-all, trot or pace, purse $250.—Brown Bessie, Madison, first; Ditch A., Milwaukee, second; Rex, Janesville, third. Time—1:04 1/4, 1:04 3/4, 1:05.
2:20 class mixed race—Ambassador of Friendship, first Red Band, Madison, second; Flora W., Edgerton, third. Best time—1:06 1/4.
Three minute class—Jessie A., Janesville, first; Grey Belle, Madison, second; Gifford, Milwaukee,

ARRIVES WITH 100 PAIRS OF TROUSERS

James Hazen Hyde, New York society man and horseman, arrived in Berlin on July 8. He is there in the interest of the American horse show and is receiving much social attention. Mr. Hyde is a regular Regu Brummel. He is reported to have nearly 100 pairs of trousers and is proud of the reputation he enjoys for his numerous and perfectly creased legwear.

Ancient Philosophy. Until philosophers are kings, and the princes of this world are filled with the spirit and power of philosophy, and political greatness and wisdom meet in one, cities will never cease from ill; no, nor the human race, as I believe, and not until then will our state have a possibility of life, and see the light of day.

THE THEATERS

THE HARP. Of all instruments in the modern orchestra there is none which arouses the curiosity of the audience so much as the harp. This ancient instrument, which was known to have been in use by Egyptians and Assyrians at least two thousand years before the Christian era, has but recently been brought to such a state of perfection that it may truly be ranked with the other orchestral instruments. The particular harp which Henry J. Williams, solo harpist with the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, which is to appear here Thursday, July 18, at the Myers theatre, is valued at $2,500. It is one of the most modern instruments, having seven pedals which are operated by the foot, and which action throws the entire instrument a semi-tone higher, thus permitting of the chromatic changes that may occur in the course of the composition. The harp is the only instrument which is perfectly attuned—that means that where the violinist or reed instrument performer sounds the same note for F sharp and G flat, the harpist has two distinct strings, each in perfect tune with the corresponding scale. On a scientific scale, F sharp and G flat are not the same tone and therefore should not sound alike. It is only the mechanical limitations of the keyboard of the piano which resulted in the adoption of a standard scale of tuning and made the two semi-tones the same. The harp also has two complete sets of strings tuned exactly alike, thus resulting in a peculiar fullness as each double tone is sounded in cadenza or arpeggios. The only limitations which the harp has are in the descending minor scales, which, however, are cleverly avoided by the well-posted composer. Mr. Williams, the harpist with the orchestra the past four seasons, was born in Abergeenny, South Wales, in 1882. His principal teacher was John Thomas of the Royal Academy of Music, London, and harpist to the late Queen Victoria and King Edward. Mr. Williams is the proud possessor of the coveted gold medal carrying with it the title of "Best Solo Harpist in England, Scotland and Wales" won at three successive Elstefodd, held annually in Wales.

"WHAT, ME QUIT? NOT SO." SEZZEE

Frank Chance. "What, me quit?" was Frank Chance's sharp reply to a recent query asking the truth of the tale spread broadcast that he was going to give way as manager of the Chicago Cubs. "Huh, not yet! I'm going to win another National league pennant, beat the American league champion, and then maybe I'll step aside." Chance says the reports that he is a nervous wreck are all bosh. He also declares that President Murphy of the Cubs is satisfied with his work.

VIEWS OF CELEBRATION AT EDGERTON, JULY 4TH.

Typists had the advantage of the Plovermakers until the sixth inning when the Plovermakers scored two runs on a single and a three-bagger, errors aiding them to score. In the first game at Athletic Park the Y. M. C. A. team got away with an eleven to one score from the Hanson Furniture nine. The Athletics started right out for a victory in the first inning, tallying four times. Cronin's run in the third inning was the only score made for the tablemakers. The Northwestern team got out the whitewash brush for the Gazette team and applied it for a score of 8 to 3 in the second game at Athletic Park, and thereby crept into fourth place with the Gazette bunch. McMahon's slants were too difficult for the Printers, and twenty-one of them struck out before him. Weakness in hitting and fielding was shown in the playing of the Gazette nine.

Game Postponed. Hard luck was in evidence again yesterday when the White Sox had a game scheduled with Evansville and the team did not put in an appearance. This is the third time in 25 many weeks that the Sox had to stay idle. They had a game two weeks ago with Milton and they did not show up and last Thursday they were to play in Edgerton and it rained and again yesterday they were disappointed.

Nationals Win. In a hotly contested game of base ball yesterday afternoon at the fair grounds the Janesville Nationals defeated the Milton Pirates in ten innings. The game was a very hard fought battle from the start to the finish; neither side was able to obtain a lead. The final score was 8 to 7 in favor of the Nationals. The pitching of Spohn was the feature of the game. The batteries for the Nationals were Spohn and Tinneran; Milton, Lamphier and Burdick.

third; Lucy W., Madison, fourth. Best time—1:09 1/4.

THE FLIPPER FLOP.
The Wisconsin State Journal has turned a flipper flop from the republican camp into the democratic stronghold and comes out for Wilson in no uncertain language. Of course no one pays much attention to the personal organ of Judge Dodge any more since its fanatic editorial column has been put in the hands of young Mr. Jones, who came from the east to reform the west, but still it is amusing to see the consistency with which it advocates Wilson's election for President and at the same time urges republicans to stick by their state party ticket and elect good progressives. There was a time when the editorial column of the State Journal was worth consideration, but at present the "Flipper Flop" policy is only on a par with the joke sheet of a Sunday supplement. Its influence is nil but it will be amusing to follow its preachings during the campaign that is to come. Of course, back of the whole movement is the fact that Collier's Weekly muck-raker has come out for Wilson, and the Journal's editorial "chef" is a pupil of the Collier school.

DEMOCRATS AT SEA.
With the Wisconsin republicans divided into practically three factions, La Follette progressives, anti-La Follette progressives, and Taft republicans, the democrats have a rare opportunity of stepping into the field and doing business. However, they are divided as usual. Instead of picking out some young wide awake man for the campaign they are tiddling around and flirting with a half dozen "has-beens" who have had the political office-holding bug stinging them for years and now see a chance to gratify their own personal ambitions regardless of fitness for the position of the office they seek. If the democrats hope to win they must get together and in their indecision is the only hope of the republicans for victory in the coming election. If they choose such men as Jones, Sutherland or a half dozen others in the state to be their standard bearers they might have a chance, but to revert back to Alward, twice defeated, Schmitz, a nice, genial, pleasant gentleman, also defeated, they are playing a losing fight from the start.

AMERICAN SOCIALISM.
The Christian Science Monitor has the following to say as to American Socialism:
"Looking forward to the presidential campaign now under way, leaders of the socialistic movement in the United States during the past three years have been wont to claim that the party vote in 1912 would show a marked gain over 1908. As the time for voting draws near it is admitted by not a few socialists that these prophecies are hardly likely to be realized. And this despite admitted gains of late, especially in academic circles and among intellectuals to whom the theory of collectivism makes an ethical appeal at a time when individualism, as such, has few defenders.
"Two obstacles stand in the way of such gains at the polls as had been hoped for and predicted. First, there is the provision made for expression of progressive opinions and convictions by the Baltimore convention's platform and nominee. If, in addition to this, Mr. Roosevelt should run on a progressive platform, there are many persons, who might otherwise vote the socialist ticket, who will no doubt cast a ballot for either Roosevelt or Wilson. Much of the socialist vote in 1908 was a registering of radical protest rather than adhesion to socialism as such.

"The second obstacle to such a vote as socialists had hoped for in November is the internal strife that has followed emergence of syndicalism in the United States. A referendum, now under way, will determine which faction of the party is to control it in the near future. If the conservative wing which controlled the recent Indianapolis convention wins, it will mean that political action is the policy to be continued. If the direct-action policy, defeated at Indianapolis, wins, then a process of disintegration of the party will go on, as the effort to substitute other and more aboriginal and forceful methods of attaining class ends are brought into conflict with law and American social traditions. At any rate, until this internal controversy is closed, defenders of the present social regime and leaders of the historic American parties (and any soon to be set up) need not be unduly concerned. In America, as in Great Britain, the labor movement, on its political and institutional sides, is now faced with issues of its own demanding wisest handling by men of conscience and reason if wreckage of the cause is not to follow. Pending a verdict by this constituency as between revolution and evolution, other elements of the American electorate are free to go their own way making choice between various shadings of progressive policy; for there seems to be no nominally conservative party in the field today."

THE BULL MOOSE.
Senator Joseph M. Dixon, of Montana, campaign manager of Colonel Roosevelt, official "fixer" for the Bull Moose himself, has issued a call for a gathering of the believers in the isms and signs of the self-styled reformer, to be held in Chicago on August 5th. This is far enough away to give the average politician time to decide what he wants to do and if the present desertion of the standard of Roosevelt continues there will be but a small sprinkling of the "guard" that stood with him in the republican convention in June. Wisconsin is represented on the call by Henry Cochems. It will be remembered that Mr. Cochems is the young man who jumped into fame and prominence at the Chicago convention by nominating Governor McGovern for Temporary chairman in opposition to Senator Root. Mr. Cochems is an ambitious youngster who has aspired to great things politically ever since he allied himself with the La Follette faction in the state. That was way back in his college days at Wisconsin. In '06, he held a job filling away catalogues in the basement of the old capitol, in that campaign being a college orator of some mean ability. Later he went to Harvard and studied law and then returned to Wisconsin to enter into the thick of the La Follette campaigns. He was most successful and worked hard and faithfully. Two years ago he sought reward by election to congress, being opposed by Victor Berger, the socialist who was elected. Since then Cochems has been soured on La Follette and his disciples and he took the opportunity of a Chicago of demonstrating his independence by nominating McGovern. He is out of the republican party. Now he is a Bull Moose and according to report is soon to leave the state for Chicago to enter business there. This is the type of man that represents Wisconsin on this call and if the other states are represented by the same quality there is nothing to fear.

Have you noticed that the men who were opposed to the commission form of government are most busy in their criticism of the actions of the present mayor and councilmen? Little things that did not amount to anything when the old regime was in vogue are now topics for interesting street corner discussion. It is easy enough to make comments, but give the commission a fair chance to see what they will accomplish before you condemn.
With the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad trying to do something for Janesville by establishing division headquarters here with prospects of further improvements, and the Northwestern taking its best trains away from the city it may not be surprising if one road benefits more by the change than the other.

Trunk Linings.
Little bags of lavender in the compartments of trunks that must stand for any length of time, sweeten wonderfully the air that is so apt to grow musty. If trunk linings are slightly scented in this way dresses and underwear are more daintily fragrant at the end of the journey than when one folds a socket among the garments themselves.

A Tub Secret.
Filling the bath tub sometimes makes more noise than we like, especially late at night or early in the morning. To prevent noise, attach a piece of rubber hose to the faucet long enough to reach to the bottom of the tub. There will be no noise or spluttering of water.

Janesville usually is interested in new things, but thus far there are no names of Janesville men on the call for the Bull Moose party.

AMERICAN SOCIALISM.
The Christian Science Monitor has the following to say as to American Socialism:
"Looking forward to the presidential campaign now under way, leaders of the socialistic movement in the United States during the past three years have been wont to claim that the party vote in 1912 would show a marked gain over 1908. Hope Deferred.
I hoped to buy a touring car this year. A-buzzing through the country I would go. That was the hope that I had held most dear. And I had scrimped and saved up all the dough.

Alas, my plans were changed quite suddenly. By hopes of motoring have fallen flat. My wife is going to use that coin, you see. To buy herself a stylish Paris hat.

What Has Become of Them?
The old-fashioned man who used to go home to lunch. Those neckties with hand-painted flowers on them. The party who used to take peppermint drops to church. The statesman who used to chew "Prize of the Gravel Train." The old-fashioned person who thought dancing was a sin. Those hand-carved meerschaum cigar holders. The presidential candidate who thought it undignified to make stump speeches. The torchlight processions and the oldfeth uniforms.

Heart to Heart Talks.
By EDWIN A. NYE

ON HER KNEES.
In the big office building it is yet dark save for the lights left all night in the long corridors. The elevator stops to let off a scrub-woman. She wears an old black dress, a diminutive hat covered with a black veil, heavy shoes. The poor old thing painfully removes her hat and veil, covers her dress with a scrubbing skirt, hunts up her pail and water and soap and brushes. She gets on her knees and stays there from 4 o'clock to half past 6. And her pay? Sixty-five cents! Out of that sum she must pay her car fare or get up at 3 o'clock in the morning. Always she walks home to save 5 cents.

Follow her. She is bent and wrinkled, worn, exhausted. She stops at a cheap stall and buys 3 cents worth of boiling meat and a loaf of bread. She cannot afford more than two meals a day and pay the rent for her two rooms, or, rather, one room and a closet. And while she cooks her poor meal, she works on coarse overalls at 3 cents per garment.

Straining her eyes—she is nearly seventy years of age—she sews until it is dark, and then to save the gas she sets the alarm clock for 3 o'clock and goes to her bed.

You would not call this woman with gnarled hands a heroine. But—Honour to the brave old soul, that is what she is!

Since she was a girl she has worked with her hands. She has followed an invalid husband to the grave, she has borne and buried children, suffered untold privations, faithfully labored and never has asked for charity. Charity? She is too brave to live on the crumbs from rich men's tables and too independent to take refuge in an almshouse. But—Is there not something wrong with a civilization that will permit a worthy old woman who has done more than her share of the world's work to labor on her knees in order to keep a roof over head and earn two meals a day? In England she would have been on the pension roll several years ago. But our government is too busy curbing trusts and changing tariffs to care for old women who are wearing out their bodies and souls in the service of society long after they have earned repose and rest.

USES TELEPHONE OFTEN THESE DAYS

"Give me long distance, please." At his summer home in Sea Girt, N. J., Woodrow Wilson, candidate for president, talks with party leaders who are sometimes a thousand miles away. The telephone plays an important part in modern life, but never is it more useful than during the course of a big political campaign.

Frank Parry had his boots half-soled with a beefsteak that his daughter cooked for him last week. She has been taking a correspondence school course in culinary art.

Had Parry told his son, Willie, that he wanted him to grow up to be as good a man as his father is, Willie will probably be able to do this without much effort.

Almost any fellow can think up seventeen good excuses why he hasn't got the time to beat a carpet. The distance of years lends considerable enchantment to the old-fashioned cookin', after all.

I never yet see a poet who had retired to live on what he had earned. The dog is man's best friend when the man is starvin' and somebody hands him a frankfurter sandwich.

There seems to be almost everything on an automobile exceptin' a whipsocket.

I never see a woman who didn't like dandelion salad or a man who did.

Landed at Last.
A man who was much in need of sleep rolled out of bed during the night. The jar did not awake him thoroughly, and his hand wandered in exploration. It encountered the mesh of some protruding springs and a sturdy, iron corner post. "In jail at last," he murmured as he passed away.

IT'S A STUNNING BATHING SUIT, BUT IF YOU WEAR IT DON'T GO IN THE WATER

"Oh, mother may I go out to swim?" "Oh yes my darling daughter But if you wear the latest bathing suit from the fashionable Ostende just promenade along the beach and don't go in the water." That is the song mothers and daughters sing these days when the daughters don the stunning creation seen in the above picture. It is the latest from Ostende. The suit is of elegant brown Raye silk plaid with poka dots. One side is trimmed with a wild rose in natural colors. A parasol, bathing shoes, cap and bag of the same material finish the effect. This suit is not used for bathing. Its wearers simply promenade along the beach to be admired and to watch the others bathe.

Take any of the departments of The Big Store. Each affords a greater selection than any other store shows. Many of the prices just now are matchless, the results of our unequalled facilities for buying. Note the values, the extraordinary variety, the wide range of qualities. No trash, no junk, no trading stamps, only merchandise worthy of the name, in variety to suit all wants. If the storekeeping policy of this big quasi-public enterprise were to be summed up in a matter of a dozen words, those dozen words would be "Our motto is not 'make a sale,' but make a customer."

A most curious accident occurred, recently, in Albany, N. Y., when a motorman lost control of a car going down a hill. When it reached Broad street it left the track, overturned and crashed into a three-story dwelling. Seven passengers and the motorman were injured, though none fatally. The car smashed into a bedroom, where a man, his wife and child were sleeping. They were showered with plaster and broken glass from the window, but were uninjured.

Cruel Realism.

John G. Johnson, the famous lawyer and no less famous art expert, was talking about some of Sargent's cruel realistic portraits. "Sargent once painted a Philadelphia woman," Mr. Johnson said, "and when the work was finished the lady's coachman called for it. 'As the coachman was studying the portrait Sargent said to him: 'How do you like it?' The man answered thoughtfully: 'Well, sir, ye might have made it a little better-looking, mebbe; but if ye had, ye'd have spoiled it.'"

She wore the first leath skirt ever seen in New York streets and won fame as the Yama

LARGE BARN HIT BY BOLT AND BURNED

Eight Horses, Two Cows and New Hay Destroyed in Fire on Washington James Place.

During the severe rain and electrical storm which struck Beloit and vicinity on Saturday night, the large barn on the Washington James place, southeast of the city, was struck by lightning about six o'clock and burned to the ground. Eight horses and two cows which were stabled in the barn were burned to death, and a considerable quantity of new hay was lost. The barn was one of the largest and finest equipped in the vicinity of Beloit, and the loss is quite heavy. The farm is operated by Miller and Adams of Beloit. The storm around Beloit and to the south of there was more severe than in this vicinity, and almost reached the proportions of a small hurricane. Trees were blown down and standing crops were beaten down by the rain. Near Roscoe there was some hail.

COMMERCIAL CLUBS RESULTS SHOWING

Have Secured Daily Package Car Service On The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Road.

Secretary F. E. Lane of the Commercial Club has secured special daily package cars via the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad for the use of Janesville shippers. The following cars for less than car lots have been arranged for daily for Gateway, points southern, eastern and western. Chicago for local deliveries, at Union depot, for Milwaukee and intermediate points. Madison and intermediate points. Mineral Point and intermediate points. Monroe and points west. The car for Ludington, Michigan has been in successful operation for the past forty days. For Minnesota Transfer, cars will be run every Tuesday and Thursday for Minneapolis, St. Paul and the northwest. These cars will be run on the demand and such to be run on Tuesday and Friday of each week. Cars will be run to Savanna, Illinois for western and southwestern and river points. The Commercial Club earnestly request the attention of shippers to these arrangements and the success depends upon the patronage.

The club has also arranged for a system of postal cards which the shipper will send the date of shipment to the consignee, the destination and the weight of the shipment. The consignee will sign the Commercial Club station the date arrived and the charges. By this means an exact account will be kept of the cost of shipment and investigation made for any overcharges.

Secretary Lane has also arranged for an exhibit of safety appliances to open in the City Hall assembly room on July 17 and continue for the rest of the month. There are twelve hundred photos and blue prints of the best methods for protecting the working men and children. Chairman Crowhart, of the industrial committee will deliver an address at a date to be set later and there will also be talks by other prominent men. This exhibit is of interest to all manufacturers employing labor.

CONFUSION MAKES TROUBLE IN SECOND HAND STORE.

Two Young Poles Nearly Spend Night in Police Station as Result of Misunderstandings.

Through a misunderstanding between Mr. Fisher, a proprietor of the second hand store, on South River street, and Marion Pulski, who conducts it, two young Poles who work for Mr. Fisher narrowly escaped spending Saturday night in the city jail. Mr. Fisher came into the city with two Poles, who are farm hands, late Saturday evening. During the rain he permitted them to enter and stay inside his store. Mr. Pulski before this time had locked up the store and gone home. Officer Morrissey in walking his beat discovered the two men in the store. Not knowing what they might be there for after closing hours he called up Mr. Pulski, who equally at sea, directed that they be arrested. Mr. Fisher came along just in time to save his hired hands from being arrested and taken to the police station, and the misunderstanding was cleared up to the satisfaction of all concerned.

JANESVILLE NAMED IN MURDER MYSTERY

Death of Watchman in 1899 in Burlington, Wisconsin, Said To Be Traced To Three Men.

According to a despatch from Racine, three men who murdered a watchman in a brewery in Burlington in 1899 made their escape by way of Janesville. The despatch is as follows:

The mystery surrounding the murder, in 1899, of John Pulis, watchman at the Pindie brewery, Burlington, Wis., may be cleared as a result of a story told to District Attorney W. V. Storms by P. M. Miller of Chicago, who says that while he was conducting a saloon in Milwaukee three men arranged for blowing open of the brewing company's saloon. He says that while doing so they were discovered by Pulis, who was killed.

The robbers went to Janesville and then to Chicago. One of them is serving a term in the Minnesota state prison, another is under arrest in Milwaukee, and the third is somewhere in Wisconsin.

A man giving the name of James S. Wood, alleged to be "Toronto Jim," is at the Milwaukee jail on a charge of burglary and is believed to be one of the gang. He was arrested May 14 by Sheriff Fred G. Schloemer of Washington county, in company with two other men, on a charge of having robbed Andrew Albrecht of Barton, Wis., of $300.

The other two gave their names as Charles Mason, alias Featherstone, Berlin, Ont., said to be "Daddy" Flynn, and William Collier, a salesman, Detroit.

Two weeks after they were arrested Mason was arraigned at West Bend, Wis., on a charge of burglary. He entered a plea of guilty and received one year in the state penitentiary.

BARNEY'S COLTS BLANKED BY BUGGS' RUSH LEAGUERS

Bush Yeaguers Won in Game at Their Picnic Yesterday by Score of 16 to 0.

Bugs' Bush Leaguers completely outdistanced Barney's Colts yesterday afternoon, galloping away from the Colts with the long end of a 16 to 0 score. The game was played at the outing of the Bush Leaguers, held at the Paul farm east of the city.

G. Hager and T. Abbott umpired the game. The teams lined up as follows: Bush Leaguers: Hall, c; T. Butters, p; Hager, ss; Fleming, 1b; Moltz, 2b; J. Butters, 3b; Berger, lf; Ritter, cf; Carl, rf; Gary, sub.

CHARGES DROPPED AGAINST MELVILLE JOHNSON TODAY

Young Man Who Caused Disturbance in Attorney's Office on Saturday Released Last Evening.

Melville Johnson, whose persistence in attempting to talk to a stenographer employed in the Jackson block on Saturday last, caused considerable bodily pain and the inconvenience of being locked up in the city hall lock-up from Saturday afternoon until Sunday night, was released at ten o'clock last night and no charges were brought against him in court today. It appears that Johnson tried to make an appointment with the young lady over the telephone and refused to take her answer that she was busy, and later again telephoned. He then visited the office she was employed in and ran foul of a vigorous young lawyer who resented his appearance and language in a physical encounter in which Johnson came off second best. Not discouraged Johnson tackled the employer of the stenographer and made insulting remarks which were also resented to such an extent that he was thrown out of the office in question and arrested by two officers. During his encounter he received several injuries that needed attention and he was taken to the police station and locked up until Sunday night when he was released.

Italians Abroad.

Estimates made by the Italian Bureau of Emigration show that fully 6,567,746 Italians, or about one-seventh of the entire population of Italy, are living abroad. The chief countries where they are found are the United States, 1,779,059; Brazil, 1,500,000; Argentina, 1,000,000, and Uruguay, 100,000. There is practically no country in the world without an Italian colony. The following are the three smallest Italian colonies in the world: Azores, 17 Italians; Corea, 10, and the Island of Madeira, 7.—New York Sun.

Morgan's Particular Fed.

Among the many collections of art objects J. Pierpont Morgan has made in this country and in Europe is one of exactly 999 miniatures that are in his London house in Prince's Gate. The little pictures are not hung on screens in the usual manner, but are kept in a cabinet whose tray-like shelves are lined with black velvet, each miniature being securely fastened to the bottom of the tray. A New Yorker going through the Morgan house while on a recent visit to London asked the guide who was showing him over the house why Mr. Morgan didn't buy another miniature and make the collection an even thousand. "Oh, that is one of his particular pets, that odd number," was the reply.

CATUN LOCKS NOW NEARING COMPLETION ARE SO BIG THAT MEN WORKING UPON THEM APPEAR AS UNDER-SIZED PYGMIES

Gatun Upper Locks, Panama Canal.

An adequate conception of the immensity of the engineering feat that is being accomplished by our government engineers at Panama can hardly be gained by looking at photographs. One must actually see the work that is being done. Some idea may be gained, however, from a study of the above photograph, which is the latest from Panama. In this picture are shown the Gatun upper locks. Three sets of gates are in process of construction. The men who are working on the locks appear as pygmies in comparison with the great walls of steel and concrete. The railway at the bottom of the canal looks like a thread.

FATHER TIME NO RESPECTOR OF PERSONS; SOME POPULAR ACTRESSES GROWING OLD

Emma Eames and Olga Nethersole (at the top) and Maxine Elliott.

Do you realize, you who enjoy the theater, that many of the old-time favorites are getting old? Has it occurred to you that fully a score of the famous actors and actresses whose superb art you have enjoyed for decades must soon pass from the stage forever?

If you have not thought of these things, stop and ponder for a moment. How long have you known Lillian Russell? he was a talked-of beauty on the stage when present-day grandfathers were young "men about town." Lillian was born in 1860. She will soon leave us, as will also Julia Marlowe, who has reached her fifty-seventh milestone.

Ellen Terry, Sarah Bernhardt, William H. Crane, and many popular stars, who act chipper enough but are gradually fading before the awful scythe of Time, are approaching senility.

Then there is a long list of those who are approaching the half-century mark: Olga Nethersole, Viola Allen, Annie Russell, Maxine Elliott, Virginia Harrod, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Marie Tempest, Melba, Emma Eames, Henrietta Crossman, Mrs. Fiske and many others. These names are picked at random, but might include many more. And you don't have to stop at the "nearing fifty" limit. Mrs. Langry, Lili Lehmann, Nat C. Goodwin, Forbes Robertson, Robert Mantell, Francis Wilson, Marshall Wilder, Robert Hilliard, DeWolf Hopper, Wilton Lackaye and many of the others are nearing sixty.

Naturally, the older generation is always passing away, but just at the present moment a big exodus of popular favorites is being planned, and many of the stars are dying.

Kept the Walters Busy.

A party of tourists which recently traveled over a Canadian railroad continuously for five days was served during that time, on the dining cars, with 660 meals daily or 3,300 meals in all. This was done on two standard dining cars, each having a seating capacity of thirty persons and managed by one conductor, four cooks and five waiters. At this rate each waiter served at each meal an average of twenty-two persons, and each chair would be used an average of three and two-thirds times at each meal.—Railway Age Gazette.

"CLINGING VINE" SCORNS BALLOT

May Buckley.

"Are you a suffragist?" some one asked May Buckley, the well-known actress the other day. "No, decidedly not," she replied. "I believe in women being what good old fashioned women used to be. And as for me, while I don't particularly fancy the expression, I guess I'm of the 'clinging vine' type. What are the men for? I say to lean on."

Miss Buckley says that women should be, and are, ashamed of themselves for trying to dress as nearly like men as possible, and she thinks it would be a good joke if men would wear lace and ruffs just to recall the good old days before women were so disturbed about the "cause."

Smoking Almost Universal.

At the present time in all civilized countries the percentage of non-smokers among grown men is very low. In most barbarous lands not only the men, but the women and the children smoke. When the first teachers went into the Philippines they reported the small islanders as getting out their pipes for a puff during recess.

One of Women's Queer Little Ways

WOMEN are intelligent creatures," said the man joining the group around the pretty five o'clock tea-table.

"Really!" exclaimed the woman. "Have you just discovered it?"

"When he begins that way," said his sister, "you want to look put."

"Yes, they are intelligent," went on the man. "They vote in some states, and they are going to vote in others."

"They certainly are," broke in the woman who had marched in the suffrage parade.

"I was going down the street this morning," went on the man, "when I ran across Florence standing on a corner looking extremely anxious and worried. I saw something was the matter, so I asked her could I be of any service."

"Oh," she exclaimed, "how good of you. I came off and forgot to bring a sample I wanted for matching a color. Would you mind going back and getting it. Tell mother it is in the gray boat in the china closet or under the potpourri jar in the music cabinet."

"She didn't at all," said his sister.

"Well, something like that. I thought it was darned queer she didn't go back herself. But nevertheless, I trotted off."

"Thank you a thousand times," she said when I brought it to her. "You see, it's bad luck to go back yourself. And I wanted to match that color to get silk for a new dress. And I knew if I went back, I wouldn't be able to match it, or else it wouldn't wear, or something would happen to the dress. So I just had to wait until somebody came along, who would go back for me."

"If she had sat down before getting her sample, it would have been all right," said one of the women.

The man gazed at her cynically. "I asked Florence if everything was sure to go right now, and she beamed and said it would, and went off in high spirits to get her silk. Now imagine any person with sense believing such folderol. And there's Sis, why you couldn't have her to walk under a ladder."

"Certainly not," responded his sister, with spirit. "Nothing would induce me to walk under a ladder. I would know that whatever project I had in hand would turn out badly."

"I suppose if you were on your way to vote, it would mean your candidacy would be defeated."

The suffragist of the party glared at him.

"I don't undertake to explain it," said one of the women. "But I wouldn't open an umbrella in the house for anything."

"Me neither," endorsed another ungrammatically, as she munched a cake.

"Aren't there any good luck signs?" inquired the man sarcastically.

"Oh, yes," said the women in chorus.

"If you find a pin with the point toward you—"

"If you dream of a horse, you'll get a letter—"

"Suppose it has bad news?" asked the man. "How would you explain that?"

The women ignored the question.

"If you find white pearl buttons—"

"If a black dog follows you home—"

"If you see a black cat—"

"No, indeed," interrupted one of the women. "If a black cat runs in front of you, it is the worst kind of bad luck. I know a man who—"

"A black cat is always considered good luck—"

In the hot argument that followed, the man's voice was drowned. As he joined another man who had just dropped in, he said: "Women certainly are the queerest combination of sense and nonsense I ever ran across."

"That's what makes them so adorable," replied the other, joining the group at the tea-table and casting his vote in favor of the black cat.

acquainted with a wife's duties, and if you are sure that the man you marry will be considerate of you, the marriage now might be all right, so long as your parents consent.

An announcement party would be very nice. You might have a quiet home wedding, with only the immediate relatives present.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: What should be the length of a dress for a fifteen-year-old girl who is five feet, one inch tall?

To her shoe tops.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am in love with a young man my age. He keeps steady company with another girl, but occasionally inquires about me to see if I am angry at him. What should you do if you were in my place?

Be indifferent to him. Your dignity as a woman should uphold you in this. Moreover, it would be very wrong of you to try to cut out the other girl. He undoubtedly prefers her or he would not go with her steadily. Possibly he has a friendly feeling for you, but a friendly feeling is not love, by any means.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am in love with a boy who lives about a block from our house. I do not know him, but I am deeply in love with him. He speaks to me when he sees me on the street and seems to like me. I would like to get better acquainted with him. How should I do it? Shall I send him a card or a note? I am nineteen years old.

My dear, you are old enough to know that when a man likes a girl, it is his place to make all the advances. He will only disrespect her if she makes the first advance. If you love this boy you surely want him to respect you as well as like you.

He probably does not reciprocate your feeling at all. If he did, he would find some way of getting better acquainted with you.

If you know him well enough to talk to him, some day, when you meet him, chat a little. If he should ask to call on you, tell him you will be very happy to have him come. Or, provided you know him well enough, you might tell him to drop in at your home some time, when he feels like it. If he wants to know you better, that is all the chance he needs.

Be pleasant, but dignified, and don't don't run after any man on earth. A man has a cheap girl in his heart, no matter what nice things he may say to her.

Lightning Cake.—Put into a cup two eggs, unbeaten, four tablespoons of melted butter (not hot), fill up the cup with milk, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and turn into a bowl. Into the flour sifter put a cup of flour and a cup of sugar, one teaspoonful of baking powder and a little salt; sift all together and stir into the other ingredients. Beat well and bake in a loaf or in layer tins.

The children enjoy brown sugar sandwiches. Spread bread with butter and sprinkle generously with light brown sugar; put together in sandwich form, and they may be eaten without soiling the fingers.

Coffee and Caramel Frosting.—When making a caramel frosting, coffee is sometimes used instead of water. It imparts an unusual flavor which is very enjoyable if one likes coffee. Brown two tablespoons of granulated sugar and when a reddish brown but not burned add three tablespoons of boiling hot coffee. When the coffee has dissolved the caramel, pour the mixture over powdered sugar until a smooth paste is formed which will not run off the cake.

Curried Eggs.—Try two small onions in butter until a golden brown, add a pint of good stock and one tablespoonful of curry powder. Stew until the onions are tender, then add a cup of cream, thicken with rice flour and simmer a few minutes. Cut eight hard-cooked eggs in halves, arrange in a deep dish and pour the sauce over them. Serve with a plain lettuce salad or shredded lettuce with stuffed olives adds to the dish.

Lettuce Salad.—Rub a salad bowl with a cut clove of garlic. Place the lettuce in the bowl and add the chopped white of a hard-cooked egg. Mash the yolk with a fork, season with salt, pepper and mustard, add olive oil and vinegar and pour over the salad.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

HAVE you an open mind?

Or do you shut up your convictions and your opinions in a strong box of prejudice in the very center of your being where they will not be subject to any danger of change or modification?

At an interesting lecture at which two speakers discussed the opposite sides of a question of the day, one of the speakers began: "When your chairman asked me to speak to you on this matter I said to her: 'Is it one of those gatherings where everyone comes with his mind made up on the opposite side? Or will there be some open-minded people there who will be interested in what I say for what it's worth and not merely for the purpose of confuting it? Because, unless there are, I don't see any real sense in my coming.'"

After the lecture one of the women in the audience stepped up to this speaker and said: "You have convinced me. I've heard several discussions on that subject, but I had my mind all made up before I heard them and I listened in that mood. What you said about being open-minded woke me up. I tried to be and I saw your side."

It seems to me that a good many people go through life with their minds made up. They will listen to arguments, but never with any intention of being convinced simply for the sake of refusing them. For some unknown reason, they seem to think it would be a disgrace to change their mind.

What a queer point of view!

As a matter of fact, change of opinion is a sign of growth. Someone has wisely said: "He who has never changed his opinion is a fool." The man who is thinking, reading, studying, living and growing the most is likely to be the man who changes his opinion the most often.

"Do I contradict myself?" says Walt Whitman serenely, in answer to a charge that he changed his opinion on something. "Well, then, I contradict myself."

Consistency is not a jewel at all. It is only the bit of paste that the fool takes for a precious stone.

If you care more for your prejudices and opinions than you do for the truth, you'll do well to go about with your mind made up. Otherwise not.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Woolley

wouldn't have jobs enough to go around, and when you haven't a job or some way of earning money, even low prices don't help much.

"Maybe some of the stores charge too much, but it isn't the small stores that are making a lot of money—unless it's the man who has a chain of small stores in a city. That's getting to be quite the thing. It isn't fair to get price reductions, and the other fellow can undersell him until he is driven out of the neighborhood. Then up go the prices again."

"It seems to me a city should do better than having municipal stores, by forbidding one man to run a chain of stores, or a big concern opening retail stores everywhere."

"Let me tell you how my husband works to earn his living. He's up at 5 o'clock every morning and at the store at 6. Saturday he is up at 4, so he can get to the store at 5 o'clock."

"He generally doesn't get away from the store at all on Saturday, and I send my little boy with a lunch and some hot coffee in a Thermos bottle. I never know when he will get home Saturday night. It's usually after midnight. Ordinary weekdays he's home at 7 or later—generally later."

"You see, I don't get much company out of my husband. Besides that, he's worried and tired to death most of the time when he is home."

"Why, our little boy hardly knows his father. The lad's in bed when my husband leaves in the morning, and again when he gets home at night. Two years ago when John had appendicitis and was laid up for a month, he said he was glad of it because it gave him a chance to see what a nice family he had!"

DINNER STORIES

Dinner stories... there are three or four hours every night that I don't have anything to do and fool my time away sleeping."

The difference, not merely of degree, but of kind, which is supposed to separate the English rector from the inferior order of curates, is exemplified by a recent incident. Returning to his parish after his autumn holiday, a dignified country clergyman, noticing a woman at her cottage door with a baby in her arms, asked: "Has that baby been baptized?" "Well, sir," replied the courtesying mother, "I shouldn't like to say as much as that, but your young man came and did what he could."

James McNeil Whistler is said once to have confronted Oscar Wilde at the height of the aesthetic movement—with Du Maurier, who was satirizing the Post lethargies in Punch with all his might, and to have genially inquired: "Which of you two invented the other?"

A farm hand had worked in the field from dawn till darkness, doing the chores by lantern light. "I'm going to quit," he said to the farmer at the end of the month. "You promised me a steady job. 'Well, haven't you got one?' was the astonished reply. 'No,'" said the man.

CURED BY A NATIVE HERB.

On board a vessel bound for India recently a man was bitten by a poisonous reptile. Both the ship doctor and a famous surgeon failed to control the poison, fast spreading through his system.

In a day the vessel reached port. An Indian medicine man was sent for, who produced a native herb which quickly allayed the poison and the man's life was saved.

Roots and herbs are nature's cure for disease. That great remedy for female ills, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had its origin in the roots and herbs of the field, some of which are now consumed yearly in making it.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN, Food Specialist

EXPERIMENTS ON DRINKING WITH MEALS

Dr. Geo. M. Niles of Atlanta reports a series of experiments to determine whether the established belief is correct that drinking at meal time is injurious. Clinical Medicine quotes other recent experiments in support of the conclusion of Dr. Niles, that it is best to drink water at meals and says that the old-established doctrine seems to be wrong. Dr. Niles took eight young men in good health who had been in the habit of drinking a glass or two of liquid at meal time, as perhaps the majority of people do, and instructed them not to drink at meals and not more than appetite demanded between meals. Another set of eight were instructed to drink all the water they desired at meal time and between meals. The former lost weight, with one exception, and the latter all gained. Dr. Niles says that water is easily separated from the other contents of the stomach and quickly passes out, that the food eaten first takes its place next to the wall of the stomach, and that the different food elements are separated, the carbohydrates passing out first, the proteins next and the fats last. Nevertheless, in many cases of serious dyspepsia I have found that the elimination of water from the meal and drinking freely an hour or two before or after meals was beneficial. The food should be thoroughly mixed with saliva in any case.

HAIR THAT GIVES FATHER TIME THE LAUGH

We are just about as old as we LOOK. People judge us, by the way we LOOK. The man or woman with grey hair is beginning to get in the "Old Timer's Class." This Twentieth Century does NOT want GREY hair—it wants the energy of Youth. The big things are being done by the YOUNGER generation.

There's a sort of "Has Been" look about those "Grey Hairs." There's always one to criticize and smile scornfully. Father Time is a stern disciplinarian. Get the best of him. Give him the laugh. Do not be a "Has Been." It's unnecessary. Use HAY'S HAIR HEALTH.

PRAYER AN ESSENTIAL OF CHRISTIAN LIFE

FOUNDATION OF EVERY FORWARD MOVEMENT MADE BY THE CHURCH.

POWER UNQUESTIONED

Significance of Prayer Set Forth in Illuminating Sermon By The Rev. Joseph Chalmers Hazen.

"Prayer has been the foundation of every great forward movement made by the church and Christianity. It is one of the essentials, one of the fundamentals, of the Christian life, and without it the Christian can not keep in touch with his God, or be an instrument for the manifestation of his power."

This was one of the pointed truths spoken by the Rev. Joseph Chalmers Hazen, pastor of the Baptist church, in a sermon on the subject of prayer, delivered before a union service at the Methodist Episcopal church last evening.

"We all feel," said the Rev. Hazen, in opening his discourse, "that we want to be successful in that which interests us. If we are in business we wish to develop a large trade, to attract and hold customers, to accumulate wealth and expand our business. If we are in one of the professions we desire to achieve a reputation for skill, a large clientele, and a growing practice. Should we interest ourselves in society, we crave popularity, many friends, and words of praise, to exercise a wide influence. If we are in politics we want power, hope of a future, and an opportunity to use that power for the good of the people."

"As Christians we all want to be successful, and be influential with God, and to become influential with God we must become praying Christians. This brings us at once to our subject—prayer. Prayer must be emphasized along with the other essential of Christian progress."

"The church has always emphasized certain fundamentals. Money is one of these; the necessity of giving so the work of the church may be properly supported and its progress forwarded. It is one of the fundamentals that we have been successful in securing."

"Another fundamental which has always been recognized from the earliest days of the church is organization; the necessity of concerted effort and system. Later the church came to emphasize charity, a great movement which was neglected for so many generations, although the Master gave it so much of His time and attention. Missions are also regarded as essential to Christianity; that the gospel shall be preached to all the people and carried into the uttermost parts of the earth in response to the orders of Christ."

"While we have been emphasizing these things, we perhaps have not been emphasizing prayer as we should. We know that when the Spirit of God has been manifested with power, and great numbers won into the folds of the church, that the movement always had its birth in prayer. Thus it was when the Spirit descended upon the disciples at Pentecost; when the apostles won their multitude of converts, and down through all the succeeding ages.

"I am not the one to say that the church has lost the power of prayer. There are those who mourn for the good old days, and see no good in the present, or hope in the future. I believe the world has never been closer to the Master, or given a larger place to His teaching and principles than at present. There are no good old days. Let us turn our eyes to the better days of the future."

"Some of us have neglected prayer. We say we can not understand it; we can not see the why and wherefore of prayer, because it is so intangible, and therefore we can not believe or practice it."

"If we acted on this basis we would pass by some of the best things in life. Take for instance, light. It gives us life, and health, and vigor; without it all life would perish from the earth. Can you analyze it, explain it, tell how it comes to pass. You can tell as much about light as you can about prayer. You accept the result and the product but you can not say how it was obtained."

The Rev. Hazen went on to relate a story of one of the most wonderful of the Moody revivals. The results were beyond accounting for by the pastor and evangelist until they found that their success was due to the prayers of a helplessly bedridden woman, who had thrown the whole store of her energy into prayer for the church.

"Can I straightforwardly ask God for money, for this and that particular thing? Jesus imposed no limit. It is chiefly a question of our attitude toward God. Our relation must be real, personal, just as real as that between you and your most loved one. Then you will know what to ask, and receive that for which you ask. The spiritual, and not the physical is real."

To illustrate the proper attitude of man to God for the purpose of prayer, the pastor told a story of Mueller, the great philanthropist, whose great orphanages are said to be the result of his prayers. At one time he was crossing Lake Ontario to Toronto. A heavy fog lay over the Lake and impeded the progress of the vessel. Mueller, anxious to reach his destination by Sunday so as to keep an appointment, asked the captain of the boat if there was hope of the boat arriving on time. He was given a negative answer. Mueller prayed that he might reach port to carry out his mission. The captain, a nominal Christian without faith, was about to join him, but was put aside with the word that his prayer would not help; he did not have the right relation to God. The fog lifted and the boat reached Toronto on time.

"Too many of us pray like the captain, our faith, if we have any resting on the repetition of formulas, or mechanical observances. Prayer will move nothing unless it at first moves you. God moves through and with us. Prayer is as real and vital a relation as that of parent to child, or friend to friend, and when it reaches that point our prayers will be answered, and we shall enter into the fullness and richness of the Christian life."

MRS. RENE B. MORROW IS PLACED ON TRIAL.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, Ill., July 8.—The case of Mrs. Rene B. Morrow, the former Chicago club-woman indicted for the alleged murder of her husband, Charles B. Morrow, was called for trial today. Morrow, who was a well-to-do inventor, was found shot to death on the porch of his home on December 23 last. Mrs. Morrow was charged with the crime after neighbors had testified, it is said, that the couple frequently quarreled and that the wife had been heard to threaten her husband.

AMERICAN WHIST CONGRESS BEGINS CHAMPIONSHIP GAMES.

New York, July 8.—Whist players from almost every part of the country are in town to take part in the twenty-second annual meeting and tournament of the American Whist League, which was opened today at the Hotel Majestic and will last a full week. There are two championship contests on the program, the Hamilton Club trophy for teams of four and the Minneapolis trophy for pairs, besides four special contests for teams and pairs and thirteen progressive games.

CAVALRY SQUADRON STOPPED IN CITY

Detachment From 15th Cavalry of Fort Sheridan Camped On H. E. Dick Property on North Washington Street Sunday.

Four troops of cavalry, a platoon of machine guns and a detachment of the hospital corps, comprising a squadron of the Fifteenth Cavalry, from Fort Sheridan, were encamped yesterday afternoon on the large open field owned by H. E. Dick, of Chicago, at the corner of North Washington street and Magnolia avenue.

The troops arrived in this city from Beloit about eleven o'clock yesterday morning, and on account of the shortness of the march, hasty preparations were made to camp here. It was originally intended that the squadron should go to Evansville yesterday, but on account of the heat it was deemed advisable to shorten the march, as four horses and two mules gave out on the march Saturday.

Supplies were ordered and preparations quickly made for establishing a temporary camp here. There was a race among the members of the various troops to see which one would have its tents pitched first, and within ten minutes after the wagon train arrived with the camp equipment, all of the tents had been put up.

The squadron was in command of Maj. McDonald, and comprised troops I, K, L, and M of the Fifteenth Cavalry. The squadron was at Belvidere on the fourth of July and took part in the big celebration of the day there. They are now on their way to the Sparta reservation for the war maneuvers, and are scheduled to arrive there on the fourteenth, although they are now about a half day's march behind their schedule. In all there were between three hundred and fifty and four hundred men in the camp, including officers, troops, members of the hospital corps and gun platoon, and wagon drivers.

Each troop has its own cooks, barber and horseboiler, and an interested crowd watched the soldiers perform their various duties about the camp all the afternoon and in the evening.

Under Major McDonald, the various departments of the squadron were commanded by Captain MacNamee, Troop I; Captain Thompson, Troop L; Lieutenant Regan, Troop M; Lieut. Smyser, Troop K; McNeil, machine gun platoon, and Lieut. Daley, medical corps. Lieut. Platzmeyer, ranking officer of Troop K, is acting as quartermaster of the camp under march, and Lieut. Smyser is in charge of that troop in his place.

Lieut. McDonald, a son of the major who recently graduated from West Point military academy, was with the squadron, but has not as yet been assigned to a command. The squadron left this city early this morning and expected to make camp in Evansville this afternoon.

CLINTON

Clinton, July 8.—The Eagle screamed until it was heard in Clinton Thursday, and a big crowd was pleased to twist his tail feathers to make him scream louder. Taken all in all it was no doubt the most successful celebration Clinton has ever had and the crowd was largest and most orderly that has been in Clinton's pleasure to host to. The program below was carried out just as advertised in every particular, everything starting just on the minute set for it. The barbecue perhaps attracted more attention and caused more curiosity than anything else. A very fine prime ox specially fattened by Swift & Co., and two sheep were roasted over a fire in a long deep trench, a cord of wood was consumed in cooking the delicious meat to the hungry people in sandwiches under a tent erected for the purpose on Front street next to Barker Lumber Co.'s buildings. One hundred and thirty-eight loaves of bread was cut up into sandwiches. The ball game although delayed by the rain was good and all attended as was also the dance in the evening at the Hotel Clinton. The fireworks which were fired just south of the depot were very good and were well received. The getting up of a celebration such as this entails a great amount of work, and Chairman Barker and his faithful committee deserved great credit for the work they have done and proved that no mistake was made in selecting Mr. Barker as director-general.

Rev. Robert Pinard, wife and family of Hiley, Wis. came Tuesday evening to visit his parents.

Miss Helen Vietha, of Dayton, Iowa, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Boden.

Charles Patchon, wife and daughter of Janesville, came down to spend the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. Hastings of Beloit, and Floyd Hollister and lady friend of Rockford, and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Smith and baby of Chicago, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hollister east of town.

Madame Waugh was able to be in town yesterday for the first time in several months. She can get around very nicely with the aid of a pair of crutches.

The funeral of Mrs. Enjer Thorson, who died Tuesday night, occurred Sunday afternoon at 1:30 at the home and from there they went to the Bergen church and burial was made in the Norwegian cemetery near the church.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

HORATIUS ON THE BRIDGE.

By Howard L. Rann.

DUELIUS HORATIUS was a Roman hero who broke into the headlines about 507 B. C. by standing off 30,000 invaders with a broadsword and some of Lord Macaulay's best poetry. It seems that a Swedish gentleman named Lars Forsena, who invented the deadly weapon known as the Etruscan vase, had organized the militia and was about to decide what was left of the Roman empire. When Horatius heard of Mr. Forsena's intentions he became suffused with patriotism and talked in short meter poetry for several minutes, after which he suggested that the bridge across the Tiber river be removed while he and a couple of sub-patriots stood on the other side and decorated the right of way with Etruscan g o r e.

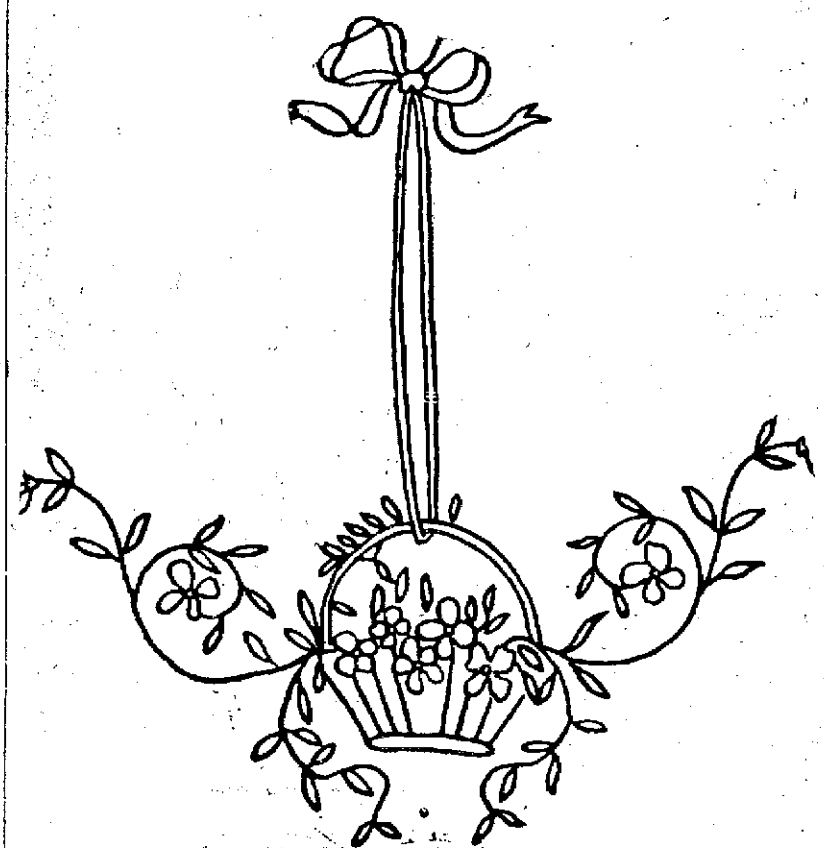

This proposition was adopted by a unanimous vote and Horatius and his comrades passed over and threw themselves and some more poetry into the branch. A number of the Etruscan militia came down the pass and made several earnest efforts to pulverize Horatius before the bridge fell in. Horatius gave them all a cordial welcome and soon had the pass choked with large quantities of the deceased foe. Every time he would run his sword through somebody with whom he was not personally acquainted he would give vent to four lines of heroic verse, which Lord Macaulay afterward upholstered and sold in book form. It must have been an inspiring sight to have seen Horatius slaying the Etruscan army with one hand and hurling strophes, dactyls and impromptu poetry at them with the other.

the other. Finally, after Horatius had caused one of Forsena's non-commissioned officers to blow up with considerable emphasis, the bridge sank into the rushing Tiber, carrying with it the two companions of Horatius, who knew when they had had enough. This was the sublime moment in Horatius' career. Facing the foe with calm courage and a gaping wound in his collarbone, he turned, delivered an original poem in a haughty tone of voice, and plunging into the Tiber swam across in 9.45 seconds. Thus was Rome saved by a union of poetry and pluck, qualities which are not often fused in the same individual.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

A FAMINE IN NEW ENGLAND.

By A. W. MACY.

It is generally supposed that such a thing as a famine has never occurred in this country, yet there was a serious one in New England during the winter of 1816-17. The weather was intensely cold, and it is said there was frost every month of the year. The corn crop had been a complete failure, and there was not more than half a crop of oats, hay, potatoes, etc. Food could be procured along the seaboard, but the means of transportation were very poor in those days, and there was great suffering in the interior. Many of the inhabitants became disheartened, and there was a stampede for the west, which then meant the Ohio country, the following spring. Many of those who thus forsook their homes and started west in wagons were poorly equipped for the journey, and some died on the way. Others reached the promised land and became sturdy western pioneers and the ancestors of many well-to-do people of today.

Origin of "Blackguard."

The English Board of Green Cloth is responsible for inventing "blackguard," a word that has strangely altered in meaning. In early times it was by no means a term of reproach, but referred to the calling of carrying coal in the king's household. Is there any other bad word in the English language that can boast of such a royal origin?

The Three Guardsmen

... By ...

ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"Now," said Planchet, "let us gag this Lubin and bind him to a tree."
This being properly done, they drew the Count de Wardes close to his servant, and as night was approaching and as the wounded man and the bound man were at some little distance within the wood, it was evident they were likely to remain there till the next day.

"And now," said D'Artagnan, "to the governor's house."

"But you appear to me to be wounded," said Planchet.

"Oh, that's nothing! Let us dispatch that which is most pressing first, and we will attend to my wound afterward, besides, I don't think it seems a very dangerous one."

And they both set forward as fast as they could toward the country house of the worthy functionary.

The Count de Wardes was announced, and D'Artagnan was introduced.

"You have an order signed by the cardinal?" asked Planchet.

"Yes, monsieur," replied D'Artagnan, "here it is."

"It appears that his eminence is anxious to prevent some one from crossing to England?"

"Yes, a certain D'Artagnan, a Bear-nese gentleman, who left Paris in company of three of his friends, with the intention of going to London."

"Do you know him personally?" asked the governor.

"Oh, yes, perfectly well."

"Describe him to me, then."

"Nothing more easy."

And D'Artagnan gave, feature for feature and in every way, the most minute description of the Count de Wardes.

"We will keep a sharp lookout for him, and if we lay hands upon him his eminence may be assured he shall be reconducted to Paris under a good escort."

The governor signed the passport and delivered it to D'Artagnan, who lost no time in useless compliments, but thanked the governor, bowed and departed.

When once out he and Planchet set off as fast as they could and by making a detour avoided the wood and reentered the city by another gate. Five minutes after they were on board.

And it was time for they had scarcely sailed half a league when D'Artagnan saw a flash and heard a detonation. It was the cannon which announced the closing of the port.

He had no leisure to look to his wound. Fortunately, as he had thought, it was not dangerous. The point of the sword had met with a rib and glanced along the bone. D'Artagnan was worn out with fatigue. A mattress was laid upon the deck for him. He threw himself upon it and fell fast asleep.

At 10 o'clock the vessel cast anchor in the port of Dover, and in a few hours D'Artagnan and Planchet were in the capital.

D'Artagnan did not know London. He was not acquainted with one word of English, but he wrote the name of Buckingham on a piece of paper, and every one to whom he showed it pointed out to him the way to the duke's mansion.

The duke was at Windsor hunting with the king.

D'Artagnan inquired for the confidential valet of the duke, who, having accompanied him in all his voyages, spoke French perfectly well. He told him that he came from Paris on an affair of life and death and that he must speak with his master instantly.

The confidence with which D'Artagnan spoke convinced Patrick, which was the name of this minister. He ordered two horses to be saddled and himself went as guide to the young guardsman. As for Planchet, he had been lifted from his horse as stiff as a rush. The poor lad's strength was almost exhausted. D'Artagnan seemed to be made of iron. On their arrival at the castle they inquired for the duke.

"Whom must I announce to my lord duke?" asked Patrick.

"The young man who one evening sought a quarrel with him on the Pont Neuf, opposite the Samaritaine."

Patrick galloped off, reached the duke and announced to him in the terms directed that a messenger awaited him.

Buckingham at once remembered the circumstances and, suspecting that something was going on in France, rode straight up to D'Artagnan, Patrick keeping in the background.

"No misfortune has happened to the queen?" cried the duke.

"Take this letter," said D'Artagnan. "From her majesty!" said Buckingham.

"What is this rent?" showing D'Artagnan a place where it had been pierced through.

"Ah, ah!" said D'Artagnan, "I did not see that; it was the sword of the Count de Wardes that made that hole when he ran it into my breast. It is only a scratch."

"Just heavens—what have I read!" cried the duke. "Patrick, remain here, or, rather, join the king, wherever he may be, and tell his majesty that I hereby beg him to excuse me, but an affair of the greatest importance calls me to London. Come, monsieur, come!"

And both set off toward the capital at full gallop.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Countess de Winter.

As they rode along the duke endeavored to draw from D'Artagnan, not what had passed, but what D'Artagnan himself knew.

The horses went like the wind, and in an incredibly short time they were in London. On entering the court of his house, Buckingham sprang from his horse, and, without taking heed of the noble animal, threw the bridle on his neck, and sprang toward the vestibule. The duke walked so fast that D'Artagnan had some trouble in keeping up with him. He arrived in a bed-chamber which was at once a miracle of taste and of splendor. In the alcove was a door in the tapestry, which the duke opened with a small gold key.

D'Artagnan found himself with the duke in a small chapel covered with a tapestry of Persian silk worked with gold and brilliantly lit with a vast number of wax lights. Over a species of altar and beneath a canopy of blue velvet, surmounted by white and red plumes, was a full length portrait of Anne of Austria, perfect in resemblance.

Upon the altar and beneath the portrait, was the casket containing the diamond studs.

The duke approached the altar, fell on his knees as a priest might have done before a crucifix, and opened the casket.

"There," said he, drawing from the casket a large bow of blue ribbon all sparkling with diamonds. "Here," said he, "are the precious studs which I have taken an oath should be buried with me. The queen gave them to me, the queen requires them back again."

Then he began to kiss, one after the other, those dear studs with which he was about to part. All at once he uttered a terrible cry.

"All is lost! All is lost! Two of the studs are wanting! There are but ten of them!"

"Can you have lost them, milord?" "They have been stolen," replied the duke, "and it is the cardinal who has dealt me this blow. See! The ribbons which held them have been cut with scissors."

"If milord suspects they have been stolen perhaps the person who stole them still has them."

"Let me reflect," said the duke. "The only time I wore these studs was at a ball given by the king a week ago at Windsor. The Countess de Winter, with whom I had had a quarrel, became reconciled to me at that ball. That reconciliation was nothing but the vengeance of a jealous woman. I have never seen her from that day. The woman is an agent of the cardinal's. When is this ball to take place?"

"On Monday next." Still five days before us. That's more time than we want. Patrick!" cried the duke, opening the door of the chapel. "Patrick!" His confidential valet, who had that moment returned, appeared at his call. "My jeweler and my secretary!"

Although the jeweler had been mentioned first, it was the secretary that first made his appearance, simply because he lived in the mansion. He found Buckingham seated at a table in his bedchamber writing orders with his own hand.

"Master Jackson," said he, "go instantly to the lord chancellor and tell him that I desire him to execute these orders. I wish them to be promulgated immediately."

"But, my lord, if the lord chancellor interrogates me upon the motives which may have led your grace to adopt such an extraordinary measure, what reply shall I make?"

"That such is my pleasure."

"Will that be the answer," replied the secretary, smiling, "which he must transmit to his majesty if by chance his majesty should have the curiosity to know why no vessel is to leave any of the ports of Great Britain?"

"You are right, Master Jackson," replied Buckingham. "He will say, in that case, to the king that I am determined on war and that this measure is my first act of hostility against France."

The secretary bowed and retired.

"We are safe on that side," said Buckingham, turning toward D'Artagnan. "If the studs are not yet gone to Paris they will not arrive till after you. I have just placed an embargo on all vessels at present in his majesty's ports, and without particular permission none can lift an anchor."

D'Artagnan looked at him with stupefaction.

"Yes," said he, "yes, Anne of Austria is my true queen. Upon a word from her I would betray my country, I would betray my king."

The goldsmith entered. He was an Irishman, one of the most skillful of his craft.

"Master O'Reilly," said the duke to him, leading him into the chapel, "look at these diamond studs and tell me what they are worth apiece."

"Fifteen hundred pistoles each, my lord."

"How many days would it require to make two studs exactly like them? You see, there are two wanting."

"A week, my lord."

"I will give you 3,000 pistoles each for two if I can have them by the day after tomorrow."

"My lord, you shall have them."

"You are a jewel of a man, Master O'Reilly, but that is not all—these studs cannot be trusted to anybody—it must be effected in the palace."

"Impossible, my lord. There is no one but myself can execute them so that the new may not be distinguished from the old."

"Therefore, my dear Master O'Reilly, you are my prisoner. Name to me such of your workmen as you stand in need of and point out the tools they must bring."

The goldsmith wrote to his wife, charging her to send his skillful apprentice, an assortment of diamonds, of which he gave the names and the weight, and the necessary tools.

Buckingham led the goldsmith to the chamber destined for him and which, at the end of half an hour, was transformed into a workshop. Then he placed a sentinel at each door, with an order to admit nobody upon any pretense but his valet de chambre, Patrick.

Buckingham assigned D'Artagnan a chamber adjoining his own. He wished to have the young man at hand, not that he at all mistrusted him, but for the sake of having some one to whom he could constantly talk about the queen.

In one hour after the ordinance was published in London that no vessel bound for France should leave the ports—not even the packet boat with letters. In the eyes of everybody this was a declaration of war between the two kingdoms.

On the day after the morning, by 11 o'clock, the two diamond studs were finished. They were imitated perfectly to look like the others.

Buckingham immediately called D'Artagnan.

"Here," said he to him, "are the diamond studs that you came to fetch and be my witness that I have done all that human power could do."

"Be satisfied, milord; I will tell all that I have seen. But does your grace mean to give me the studs without the casket?"

"The casket would only incumber you. Besides, the casket is the more precious from being all that is left to me. You will say that I keep it. And now, how shall I ever acquit myself of the debt I owe you?"

D'Artagnan colored up to the eyes. "Let us understand each other, milord," replied he. "What I have done has been for the queen and not at all for your grace. And, still further, for one who is my lady, as the queen is yours."

"I understand," said the duke, smiling, "and I even believe that I know that other person. It is—"

"Milord, I have not named her!" "That is true," said the duke, "and it is to this person I am bound to discharge my debt of gratitude."

"You have said, milord; for truly, at this moment when there is question of war I confess to you that I see nothing in your grace but an enemy, whom I should have great pleasure in meeting on the field of battle, all which, however, will not prevent me from executing to the very point my commission or from laying down my life."

Several towns in Norway and Sweden have recently taken steps toward the general introduction of electric heating, to replace the use of stoves burning coal or wood. Few buildings in these places have central heating systems, and the tile stoves now generally used could easily be adapted to receive electric heaters. The electric current will be supplied by the public plants, which are generally run by water power.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, July 8, 1872. The crops of Rock county (with the exception of tobacco) have reached that point in their growth here we can safely predict a yield unprecedented in the history of the last decade. Corn has increased so marvelously in size within the past three weeks that farmers scarcely recognize their own fields and the spontaneous development of wheat has affected a complete change in the appearance of nature within a short space of time. Farmers are already in the midst of their haying and rye and barley to harvest as soon as the hay is secured. The harvest of wheat and oats will follow, making the next month one of activity in the agricultural districts and one of corresponding dullness in the cities and villages which depend upon country trade for their business.

more axle is to be placed on a car belonging to the C. M. & St. P. R. R. company, to run between Monroe and Milwaukee.

Repairs and changes are in progress at the second and fourth ward school buildings.

All Souls Church: All Souls church is now closed for vacation. The trustees are taking immediate steps to fresco the walls and otherwise improve the building. The work will be finished so as to open again with renewed life and energy under the settled pastorate of Rev. Jenkins Lloyd Jones. The Sunday school will be continued through the summer. Although this society has been living without a regular minister, since October last, it finds itself at the end of the year out of debt, with something ahead. A reunion of all members and friends of the society is to be held at their parlors July 9.

UNCLE WALT The Poet Philosopher

Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams
BY WALT MASON

I fear we don't appreciate the divers blessings, truly great, that we enjoy each day. We take such blessings as they come, contented that they help us some, and heedless of our way. When I was young the summer heat would lift a man clear off his feet and fry him to a crisp; there was no antidote in sight, and he would lie awake all night and maledictions hiss. When Bryant wrote his deathless THE ELECTRIC FAN verse I'll bet he used to freely curse the red-hot summer days; for when the heat wave drives you blind it's mighty hard to sit and grind a grist of helpful lays. Longfellow, Emerson and Poe, and all the bards of long ago, just sizzled in the heat; they wrote their verse, inspired or wise, and mopped their brows and damned the flies and longed for winter's sleet. And I, who live in better times, am sitting here producing rhymes in comfort and in peace, while greater poets tore their fur and cursed the blasted thermometer from Griguland to Greece. The sun is at the same old game, but he may strain and bust a hame, he can't disturb my ease; I pull a string or press a knob and then pursue my jingling job fanned by machine-made breeze. I wish I knew who was the man who gave us the electric fan, that makes the summer cool, that brings right to the poor man's door the woods, the mountain and the shore, and eke the swimming pool.

Not Really So Bad.

"And I suppose," said Miss Gushing-ton, "that while in London you were at court?" "Only once," admitted Mr. Lushington, blushing. "But I wasn't giddy and I got off with a reprimand." —Newport News.

"Great Scott! Don't you know it's dangerous to eat pins?"
"Oh, these are safety pins."

HE WAS WISE

Tom—When he goes to church he puts a nickel in the contribution plate and when he goes to the theater he pays $2 for his seat.

Jack—That shows that he wants to be close wherever he goes.

BRINGING IT BACK.

Swellington—Do you ever have any doubts about your love for her?

Wellington—Without a doubt; but when it comes on I get down a stack of unpaid bills and look them over.

A REPRIMAND

Mr. Williams (to son)—Whar am dat brack brudder of yo'ra?

Son—He dun cuttin' sticks, pop.

Mr. Williams—Dar, now; dat's niggah all ober. Why doan' you corree' yo' furzeology an' say he am amper-tatin' timbah, niggah, an' talk laik white folks?

Deep Childish Reasoning.

Father (to Margery, who has been a long time fetching the newspaper)—When you're asked to do anything, Margery, you should always run, Margery—Yes, I will, daddy; except, of course, I can't when my legs ache. Father—Rubbish; your legs never ache. Margery (indignantly)—Hoo! what's the use of the word "ache," then?—Punch.

The Skin and Not the Blood.

Until recently it has been a generally accepted theory that eczema was a disease of the blood. Scientific investigations have taught us that eczema is positively a skin disease and curable through the skin alone. Meritol Eczema Remedy is applied directly to the diseased skin, the effect is marvelous and its results permanent. No need of trying Meritol Eczema Remedy. Reliable Drug Co., Sole Agents.

Rich Haul by Forgers.

The Bank of Naples (Southern Italy) has recently been the victim of fraud to the extent of $160,000, by means of genuine checks, the figures of which, however, had been cleverly altered and augmented with the aid of chemicals and a perforating machine. The trickster, of whom there is no trace, had checks cashed simultaneously at the branch offices in Turin, Florence and Rome.

Saint's Tomb to Order.

An English contemporary tells the story of an Indian frontier tribe which, having been jessed at by another tribe because it possessed no tombs of saints, went out, killed a well-known holy man, and buried him.

TO BUILDING CONTRACTORS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the State Board of Control at the office of the Superintendent of the Wisconsin Industrial School for Boys, Wausau, Wisconsin, up to 2 o'clock p. m., Friday, July 13, 1912, for furnishing all the material and labor necessary for the alteration of the main building of the Wisconsin Industrial School for the Blind, Janesville, Wisconsin, according to the plans and specifications prepared for said alteration of main building by J. E. Hoyt, Superintendent of Construction, Madison, Wisconsin.

Plans and specifications will be on file in the office of the Superintendent of the Wisconsin Industrial School for the Blind, Janesville, Wisconsin. Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified check in the sum of at least two per cent of the amount of the bid and made payable to the order of Ralph E. Smith, President, Board of Control, to be forfeited to the state in case the bidder or bidders chosen fail to enter into a contract for said work and give a proper bond to secure the performance of the contract.

This should be sealed and addressed to the State Board of Control, in care of the Superintendent of the Wisconsin Industrial School for the Blind, Janesville, Wisconsin, and upon the envelope should appear the name and address of the bidder, endorsed "Proposal for Alteration of Main Building of Wisconsin Industrial School for the Blind, Janesville, Wisconsin."

The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids or to accept any bid or combination of bids which it may deem most advantageous to the state.

Plans and specifications may be secured at the office of the State Board of Control upon deposit of $5.00 to secure their return.

Dated Madison, Wisconsin, this 6th day of July, 1912.
